Dan Rayfield announces over 100 Endorsements in just 30 Days
Elected and Community Leaders across Oregon throw support behind Rayfield's AG campaign

Corvallis, OR – Today, Democrat Dan Rayfield announced 100 endorsements for his campaign for Oregon Attorney General after declaring his candidacy just last month. The endorsements represent a broad swath of federal, state, and local elected officials including:

- 4 former Governors - Kate Brown, Barbara Roberts, Ted Kulongoski, and John Kitzhaber
- Congresswomen Andrea Salinas, Val Hoyle, and Suzanne Bonamici
- 55 State legislators, 10 mayors, and County Commissioners from 6 counties
- Public safety and legal leaders
- Organizations representing thousands of working Oregonians

"We are honored by the breadth and depth of support for our campaign," said Rayfield, who currently serves as Speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives. "As we travel around the state, people have really responded to the priorities and agenda we're offering for the Department of Justice."

Former Governor Barbara Roberts spoke to Rayfield's effectiveness and values: "Dan has a long record of not only understanding the values, needs and priorities of Oregonians — but also delivering on positive solutions. I know he'll be an Attorney General the people of Oregon can trust."

Public safety and legal community leaders are also supporting Rayfield, including retired Corvallis Police Chief Nick Hurley, who said: "Dan understands what the Attorney General can do to help make Oregon safer and a record of leadership to make it happen."

Rayfield stressed that the endorsements he has earned so far are just the beginning of the campaign's outreach. "We are incredibly excited about reaching out to every corner of Oregon to talk about how the next Attorney General can be the People's Lawyer to help make Oregon safer, more equitable and just and more effective for all Oregonians."
